

Ridgewood View Park Reservoir & Pump Station Project

The Tualatin Valley Water District (TVWD) is beginning a project to improve the reliability of the water supply in the West Hills area by replacing aging, critical water facilities in Ridgewood View and Reservoir Parks.

The project provides an opportunity to ask the public to help revisit the appearance and use of the parks as part of the post-construction restoration plan.

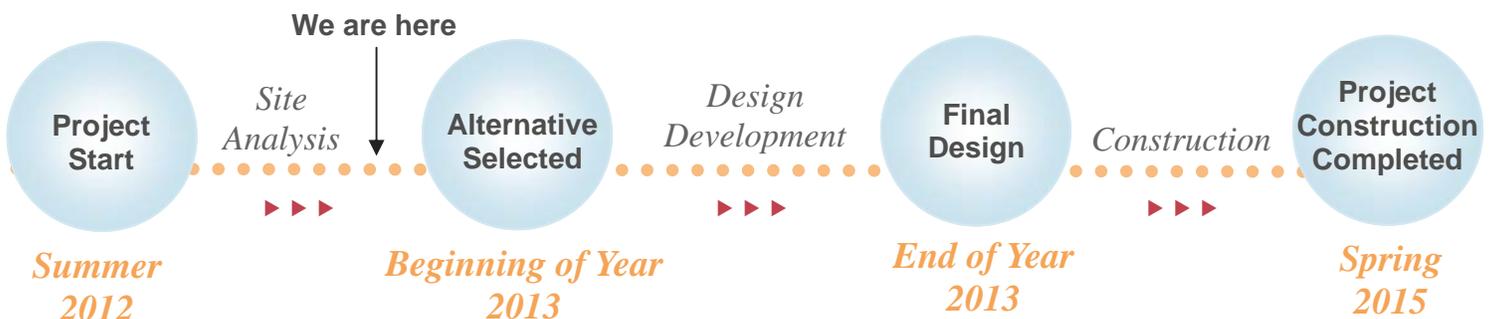

The following options are considered to be the most viable:

- Install new reservoirs in the two existing reservoir footprints with a single new pump station.
- Construct new reservoir and pump station in the current Ridgewood View location.
- Construct a new reservoir and pump station in a new Ridgewood View location.

Project Schedule

TVWD is currently in the process of evaluating alternatives to replace the deficient storage and improve the parks at the same time. A preferred water facilities alternative will be selected by early 2013. The design phase will occur from Spring 2013 through the end of 2013. Park improvement options will be evaluated following selection of the preferred water facility infrastructure. TVWD's goal is to have new facilities constructed by the Spring of 2015.

Next Steps

● Site Analysis

Initial field work is nearly complete. The information collected will be used to screen storage reservoir and pump station alternative concepts to help determine the preferred water facilities alternative. Findings include information about:

- Geotechnical exploration and drilling
- Hydraulic modeling
- Wetland delineation
- Arborist tree assessment
- Surveying & utility locations
- Noise monitoring

● Select New Water Facilities Alternative

A preferred water facilities alternative will be selected by considering public input and using engineering and operational criteria. That option will be showcased at Open House #2 in December before being finalized in January, 2013.

● Parks Master Planning

The project is an opportunity to ask the public to help make the best Park restoration decisions possible based on the selected water facilities alternative. The public will be asked to participate in revisiting Ridgewood View Park's future use and appearance. Open Houses scheduled for March and April will review park improvement ideas. TVWD will work with neighbors and Tualatin Hills Park & Recreation District to finalize parks plans by spring 2013.
